MAY MEETING MINUTES

We opened with the Pledge of Allegiance. The minutes were voted on as was the Treasurer's report. We had a visitor, Mr. Cantrell. We also have a new club member, Terry Elsea.

A suggestion was made that we put a limit on the number of lots a person can bring to the auctions.

Mrs. Bricker was invited by club president Mike Ezell to attend the meeting because of a letter he received. Gene Bricker won a Vermeil award for outstanding newsletter. Mike Ezell also presented Gene with a mug bearing his initial and a cake was brought to celebrate.

We broke for refreshments. We then continued with the auction.

MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

Greeting Fellow Collectors

Here we are almost at the end of May. This year is flying by and great things are happening. The month that everyone anticipates every year is here. It is our month for the club picnic. We will be meeting at the River Front Park Pavilion #4. We can start gathering anytime starting around 3:30 PM and we will eat at 5 PM. The meat will be provided by the club and we ask that you bring at least two sides. The picnic always gives us a break from the regular meetings and to have a good time of fellowship and fun. I hope that you are making plans to attend. I will be calling those of you who were not at the last meeting so that I can get you on the list. You can also email me at mhezell@gmail.com to let me know you are coming and how many will be with you. Looking forward to enjoying this time with you!

What to do when you inherit stamps?

For a detailed discussion of what to do when you inherit stamps, see the article at:
https://stamporama.com/articles/display\_article.php?id=RASd3nKLqcQNo

This article begins:

"To a stamp collector, inheriting a relative's stamp collection is almost like winning the lottery. But a non-collector who inherits a stamp collection has a dilemma: he or she has heard that stamps may be valuable, but hasn't a clue how to find out the value of their new collection, much less how to turn it into cash. This article is intended to help sort out the confusion."

The article begins,

1. Become a collector
2. Donate your collection
3. Sell your collection,

And gives an extensive discussion of the various ways to deal with the inheritance. It is too long to adequately cover the details here. Log on to the web site and learn the positive and negatives of the options.

Canada - Little Known Facts of WWII

Part 1

(By John Burnett)

I have been an active collector of the postal history of Canada in WWII for the past 50 years. During that time I have discovered some interesting postal history facts that seem to have been lost on collectors (or at least exhibitors).

This is part 1 of a series of small articles that will address a number of these discoveries, they are not meant to be the "see all do all" of historical facts but simply meant to provide club members with things to keep an eye open for when visiting that bourse table and perhaps to help judges make an assessment of relative scarcity of some material shown in an exhibit.

This first article concerns a very scarce piece of Canadian postal history that is quiet difficult to identify and yet it has the identification just staring at you from the cover.

It all starts on the 26th of May 1940 at the little town of Dunkirk on the shores of France where approximately 350,000 British troops are surrounded with their backs to the sea.

Britain mounts an operation called "Operation Dynamo", where she mobilizes 850 ships and boats (mainly boats) to evacuate her troops from the coast of France. In case you don't know the difference between a ship and a boat, the classical definition is "you can carry a boat on a ship". Amazingly by June 4 this operation is complete and 338,000 troops were evacuated, many of them open longboats towed behind ships.

When all that could be evacuated were, Great Britain had left 75 % of all her supply of small arms, cars, trucks, (see figures 2 and 3)

Most importantly Britain had left 70% of her Army Infantry Officer Corps in the hands of the Germans! It's a recognized fact that had Hitler decided to invade at that time the only thing Britain had to defend herself was an unarmed army and an armed Home Guard generally carrying personal shot guns.

Great Britain had another important use for its army officers that Churchill was not prepared to give up and that was to supply the Office Corps to the Indian Army and African Armies.

To alleviate this issue Churchill put out a call to Canada to "lend" England some officers from the Canadian Army, what he asked for were Captains and below in rank. Canada put out a call for volunteers and thus was created the "CANLOAN" Operation. It is recorded in the Canadian Military archives that 622 Canadian Infantry Officers were loaned to the British by 1944 and that early on, many were Majors who took a demotion to be part of this force.

Lt. J.H. Fransham was part of XXX corps. 15th Scottish were on the immediate right of the 3rd Canadian Division in the heavy fighting in and around the Moyland Wood where Lt. Fransham was probably wounded. This letter has been redirected to a hospital where Lt. Fransham was recuperating.

To know that this is a CANLOAN cover you must look closely at the address. All CANLOAN Officers were given a 3 figure number between 001 - 622 prefixed by the letters "CDN".

identified is by the "CDN" followed by 3 figures.

With the vast majority of CANLOAN officers joining the British forces in 1944 in time for the invasion of Europe at Normandy there are not going to be a lot of these envelopes around for us collectors to find.

Of the 622 officers who joined British forces 43 were killed in action, the group acquitted themselves extremely well suffering many casualties and earning decorations disproportionately to their numbers. On a recent visit to Ottawa I went to see the CANLOAN memorial to her 43 Killed In Action members, located on a quiet street in the diplomatic area of Ottawa.

SEARCHING FOR MORE ACTIVE COLLECTORS

The question posed often still remains: How do we get more of what appears to be many lone wolf stamp collectors into the organized philatelic world of societies, clubs, and shows?

One of the reasons for concern is that seemingly the hobby is in somewhat of a decline — APS membership is down, stamp clubs have shrinking membership, the traditional downtown stamp store has virtually disappeared, and most shows have seen interest and attendance decrease. This is based on two main causes — aging collectors and the lack of younger people picking up the hobby. It is when we take a look at the lack of new collectors replacing the old timers that we can begin to see the true picture.

How many of us have lamented that our children and grandchildren generally show little interest in stamp collecting, that they have too many other interests: computers, the internet, video games, cell phones, and extracurricular activities.

It is easy to conclude that philately is in decline, in fact dying, and that this is inevitable and nothing can be done about it. One can disagree. The perspective is that the interest in stamp collecting is on the rise and the future of our hobby is going to be a positive one.

Two articles in the philatelic press would reinforce optimism. In the January 6, 2012, issue of Mekeel's & Stamps, John Leszak's editorial, "Reaching Out to Casual Stamp Collectors," makes some telling observations. Leszak believes that organized collectors are outnumbered by casual collectors by about 200 to one and may really be more like 500 to one. These casual collectors do not belong to organized philately, are not aware of the APS or the stamp periodicals, and generally collect non-traditional material such as gold foil, topical, and preassembled collections that we may generally frown upon.

Nevertheless, they are stamp collectors and we need to take a look at how we can better reach them and at least let them know about all that organized philately offers.

Another impressive editorial appeared in the January 30, 2012, issue of Linn's Stamp News and was written by Michael Baadke. What prompted his article was a report from the online reference site Wikicollecting stating that postage stamps ranked first on a list of 75 collecting categories (antiques was second, coins fifth, comic books tenth, and postcards 73rd). Baadke also believes: "The stamp hobby remains healthy" and "has fans all over the world."

In the light of the realization that there are an enormous number of stamp collectors out there, and in fact, the hobby is both healthy and on the rise, we probably need to reevaluate our pessimistic views and figure out ways of better reaching more of these avid hobbyists.
